“ My condolences to Joe Healy's family. My dad (George A. Fulton)knew Joe Healy much better than I did. My dad worked with him in the insurance industry at a company called Consumer's life. My dad was in charge of both claims and compliance. Joe Healy consulted on many cases. When I was a child I first read "A Game of Wits". At that time I thought it was an interesting detective novel. The next time I read it was after my dad had passed (2004)and I received the book. By then,I was a life insurance underwriter and was able to enjoy it from a new perspective.##imported-begin##George Fulton##imported-end##

“ Like many others I was fortunate to know Joe Healy. I had the pleasure of working with him in planning the E.C.C. organization probably back in 1975. Joe was a true professional, a good friend who had endless educational and interesting stories about his claim exploits. We all learned from Joe and he will be missed by all. May your soul rest in peace Joe. Your friend, Tom Timpanaro

“ Joe was like the Godfather of his tribe of the ECC family. I felt honored when he used to approach me and ask me if I would continue being a part of the ECC. His stories told up in the "Sinatra Suite" at the Waldorf over cigars and his utter devotion to making claim people the best through the best conference will be long remembered. I could always call on Joe for help and he always responded. I will miss you Joe. My condolences to Ann and Bill and the rest of the family.###imported-begin##Walter Boyd###imported-end##

“ In the 30 years I've been affiliated with the ECC my fondest memories will always be those that included Joe. He was just fun to be with. He set the tone and truly made the organization a family affair. If you listened carefully to his stories you not only learned about insurance but you learned about people and life. We'll carry on his tradition and will always treasure the memories. My sincerest sympathy to you, Ann, and to Bill and Janice and the entire "clan." God bless - Sincerely, John Petrucci###imported-begin##John Petrucci###imported-end##

“ My sincere condolences on the loss of Joe. I have known him professionally for close to 30 years. He was a man of high ethical standards and a great contributor to our business. Joe was always willing to share his time and knowledge. I went through two copies of his book, "A Game Of Wits", which I used in training new claims people over the years. He had a wonderful memory for details, rarely forgetting a name or the details of a particular investigation. I am certain he charming St. Peter with his wonderful stories. Rest in peace, Joe.###imported-begin###John Abbott###imported-end###

“ Dear Ann and family, We were so sorry to hear about Joe’s passing. Carol and Howard Kaplan emailed us last night with the news. I am filled with so many grand memories of Passovers, Christmas trees, your beautiful wedding and of stories and tales of intrigue that Joe spun so well. He was always ready to be kind and helpful, he was our favorite private eye. He will be well remembered as well as missed. We will see you when we return on February 9th. “ My deepest condolences to all of Joe's family and friends. I first met Joe many years ago when he spoke at a claim seminar in Wilmington. He told the most fascinating stories and will probably always remain one of the most interesting people I will ever have the pleasure to meet. He was a great investigator, with wonderful people skills. He will be very much missed by the insurance community.
