“ Bill was "The Ambassador" of The Excelsior. Everyone knew Bill. He seemed to be the first to arrive in the morning, taking care of the parking garage, discussing weather reports, greeting patients and tenants, guiding them past icy patches and past oncoming cars. It seemed like he covered lots of holidays, too, which was very kind of him. He was such a character, too. He would always have me, my staff, and lots of the patients stop and roll down the window of the car when we got to the booth so he could chat. he had that wry smile and nod of his head which was so endearing. Being a fertility practice, he even got to find out when patients got pregnant! (Because he would quiz our "frequent fliers"... teasing them : "what are you still doing here?"). He was an eternal presence. If there was ever a day that he wasn't there, it would be a topic of discussion in the office. So when he wasn't there on Monday, we guessed that he was taking a well-deserved vacation. But, sadly, we found out that in fact , he would never be coming back. Words cannot express our grief, which I'm sure is nothing compared to that of his family. To his family, please know that he was also well-known and loved at work, and he will be sorely missed.
